Descent Newsletter (13) January 2022

BEST WISHES FOR THE NEW YEAR.

Preparations for the February edition of Descent is now well advanced, though we are still working hard on finalising all the content. This is taking some juggling, because we will be presenting perhaps the largest report ever published in the magazine, to cover the huge cave rescue in Ogof Ffynnon Ddu in November. Indeed, this might be the widest coverage of a rescue to yet have appeared anywhere in the UK (we don't claim it is, but it feels like it might be), with input from the rescue team, medics, rescuers and the injured caver himself, providing a fascinating account of the timeline from both sides: those on control and alongside the stretcher plus impressions gained will be being carried.

And, to allow this to fit with everything else that we normally present, for the second issue in a row we are including eight extra pages. All of which means, if you haven't renewed your subscription, now's the time to do so to catch the automated mailing (and make life easier for us here at Descent).

Of course, single copies of the current issue are still available (or can be incorporated in any late subscription renewal or new sub). You will find more information about this edition by clicking on the image.

The 2022 Underground Worlds calendar sold out very early on, as predicted. Many thanks and well done to all who ordered this well before Christmas; we are still (even in January) receiving enquires whether it is available so with regret we have to say no (since leaving the EU, the additional paperwork and fees to pay to bring in more, as we have done in the past, are prohibitive).

We hope you will look forward to receiving the next Descent.

Best wishes from
Chris & Judith
